

Los Guapos

“High Energy Latin-Rock Crossover Band”

Los Guapos are a cross-genre, highly energetic five piece band, that weaves a musical tapestry of jazz improvisation, R&B, Rock, Surf, and Garage melodies, supported with Latin and Jazz rhythms and percussion that inevitably leads to bodies on the dance floor.

With sonic influences ranging from: Surf to Swing, Latin to Easy Listening, Jazz to Rock, Pop to Earth Wind & Fire, all with an undercurrent of a spaghetti western soundtrack score; Los Guapos is a band that may be hard to put in a specific genre, but one that is almost guaranteed to make you dance.

Originally founded in 2014 by Justin Valdez; this group prides itself on their ability to write original music that will get and keep people dancing. This group is an all—out entity that will pack a house, no matter what size! They utilize many outlets to keep venues and their burgeoning fan base current with the activity of the band.

Although Los Guapos is a five piece band; the sound and musical versatility of this group adds value to any venue. While many groups have people that will play an instrument and sing, this group features two “triple-threats”, in addition to most of the band singing while they play.

The group features Justin Valdez on guitar and vocals, percussionist/vocalist/acoustic guitarist Engel Indo, John Read on stand-up and electric bass, Morgan Schlaline on drums, and the second “triple threat” that is Richard Verdugo on keyboard, sax and vocals.

Whatever the season, and for whatever the reason; if you want to pack a place out with people who will dance the night away, Los Guapos is only a short phone call away!
